

XM Radio instant traffic & weather is very useful to me - I travel a lot, and I don't like to mess with the local radio to find which stations are airing what at what time. I don't think it's appropriate for the FCC to limit the use of such features as the XM Instant Traffic & Weather, as it is a service that XM Subscribers pay for. If FM radio feels threatened by the introduction of such services, they should take it upon themselves to improve their services instead of lashing out against new technology.
